Beyond Chakrata, the road runs out of houses and into deodar. Walk in from Lokhandi, spend one night in a forest that feels far older than the army town below it, and climb before dawn to Vyas Point, where the whole snow wall of the Garhwal Himalaya lines up across the north. Deoban is a weekend trek that trades crowds for silence, and you will have to look hard to find a quieter forest within a day of Delhi.

The Deoban trek explores the deodar and oak forests above Chakrata in the Jaunsar-Bawar area of Dehradun district, Uttarakhand. The name means 'forest of the gods', and the deodar itself takes its name from the same idea. The trek starts at Lokhandi, a hamlet on the road beyond Chakrata at 2,560 m (8,400 ft), spends a night at a forest camp at Saraswati at 2,500 m (8,202 ft), climbs through the Deoban forest past an old forest rest...
